

His Honour Nic Madge

I am a writer, judicial trainer and recently retired circuit judge. I have considerable international experience. I am fluent in French. I have reasonable, although somewhat rusty, Spanish.

Judicial Career

Circuit Judge	2004 to 2018
I sat in both crime and civil – most recently at Luton Crown Court and the County Court at Central London. Previously at Harrow, Peterborough (where I was Resident Judge) and Inner London Crown Courts.
Recorder/Assistant Recorder	1999-2004
District Judge	1995-2004
Deputy District Judge	1989-1995

Academic Qualifications and Practice

M.A. Law (Cambridge)
I was admitted as a solicitor in 1978.
Solicitor in London	1978-1985
Partner, Bindman and Partners, solicitors (London)	1985-1995

Legal lecturing and training in the U.K.

Member of Judicial Studies Board/Judicial College tutor team from 1997 to 2018, both as a lecturer and a syndicate leader, including Judge as Communicator, Craft of Judging, Business of Judging, Civil Continuation, Civil Recorder Induction, Human Rights Act, Deputy District Judge induction, country-wide seminars on Housing Act 1996, Anti-social Behaviour, and circuit based civil and criminal refreshers.

I have given lectures on expert evidence for the Expert Witness Institute and the Academy of Experts, and to Scottish judges (organised by the Scottish JSB) and the BMA.

Prior to appointment as a judge, I lectured on an ad hoc basis for Brunel University (law for social workers), Goldsmiths College (criminal law for youth workers), Shelter (housing law for practitioners), the Legal Action Group (accredited courses for practitioners), the Law Society (on advocacy skills, civil procedure, judicial review and housing law at national conferences), local law societies, barristers' chambers and solicitors' firms and commercial providers (e.g. Family Law and Jordans).

International Training Experience

Member of JSB International Board from 2011 to 2014.

I have given lectures (including on the evidence of children and vulnerable witnesses) at international conferences in France, Belgium and Ireland, organised by the Council of Europe and the Franco-British-Irish Judicial Committee. In 2016, I participated in a two-week individual EJTN stage shadowing French judges in Lyon.

In 2013, I was one of a small team of British judges who trained judges in Malta on judicial skills and competencies.

In 2014, at the request of the Chief Justice of Rwanda, I conducted seminars in Kigali and drafted guidelines for the assessment of damages in Rwanda.

More recently, I have

- delivered a lecture on Restorative Justice (in French) at the Université Catholique de Lyon (2017);
- led an all-day training session for 35 senior Thai judges on the subject of corruption (Strathclyde University, 2018);
- been a judge of the EJTN sponsored THEMIS competition for European judges and magistrates in Paris (2018); and
- presented lectures and led seminars in Judgecraft and Ethics for Bulgarian judges and prosecutors (ERA - the Academy of European Law, 2019)

I am currently engaged in a Slynn Foundation programme to support the Tanzanian judiciary in their efforts to reform court procedures to render them more efficient and effective. My primary role in this project is to design and deliver "training the trainer" courses for different levels of judges and magistrates in Tanzania.

I have visited courts and spoken to judges in many countries including Ghana, Sri Lanka, Singapore, New Zealand, South Africa, Bhutan, France, USA and Canada. I have visited the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg.

While sitting in court in this country, I have hosted visits by judges from a number of countries, including Spain, Germany, Japan, China, Uzbekistan, Japan and USA.

I was a member of the Franco-British-Irish Judicial Committee from 2001 until 2012 and was involved in planning colloques for judges from these jurisdictions. As well as speaking at such colloques, I have acted as rapporteur. Those colloques took place without interpreters.

Human Rights Missions to Ankara (Amnesty International, 1990) and Mexico (FIDH, 1991).

Writing and publishing

I have written and published extensively. Most of my writing has been on legal topics, but accounts of visits to courts in other jurisdictions and some of my travel writing have also been published (e.g. in International Tours and Tourism News and the Pamir Times).
